In substantiation of his statements Dr. Larne laid before the council a report from the state board of health on a culture showing that the children's throats contained malignant diphtheria germs. The report was dated March

Mrs. Kent had been quietly delighted when Rhoda Sherwin, the daughter of an extremely prosperous old Miss Bessie I. Champlin of Brad-y street entertained the O. M. club its week. A meeting of the Tuesday club was fined, sinuous blondness, but she was most attractive, if you happened to be discriminating enough to sdimine her type. And then she would have plenty of money, and money was so convenient. Of course nothing could have been more distanceful to Mrs. have been more distasteful to Kent than to have her son marry brazenly for money, but there was no reason why he shouldn't fall in love with a sweet, refined girl like Rhoda. With utmost delicacy Mrs. Ken-nursed the incipient love affair along. Her maternal hoverings were tactful and unobtrusive, her method subtle. There were two voices—one was soft and murmuring, the other clear cut and distinct. Instantly Mrs. Kent was on the alert.
